Borg-Warner receives Award of Excellence

BY ELLIS CUEVAS try Breakfast was held Friday at Diamondhead's Country Club. The theme of the breakfast was the importance jobs play in the economic development of our county.

Borg-Warner Chemicals, Inc. was the recipient of Hancock County's first Award of Excellence.

The presentation was made to Leo Kowal, BayMar plant manager by David McDonald, Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission treasurer.

McDonald said Borg-Warner has brought a lot to the county and also mentioned the key role Wilson Webre, former executive director of the Port and Harbor played, in the industry locating at Port Bienville, Borg-Warner has an investment of $120 million investment at the Port Bienville site.

McDonald stated the chemical company has a $5 million annual payroll at the Port Bienville facility.

Borg-Warner produces engineered thermoplastics, which are shipped in bulk rail cars to other plants within the company for processing. The plastic is used for hundreds of applications, including automobile interior trim, appliances, telecommunication and business machine housings, pipe, sporting goods and recreational equipment such as boats, campers and snowmobiles.

Ronald Cuevas, Hancock County Board of Supervisors president said, "With industry board is committed to economic development.

The county's leader continued, "One of the main goals of the board, (Hancock County Board of Supervisors) is to provide jobs for the class of 1992. The graduates of Hancock County should not have to leave the county to find employment; we are dedicated and committed.

Cuevas indicated the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission would be making a major announcement in the quality of life, Cuevas said. Kowal presented a brief slide presentation of the BayMar Plant and he too, added Webre's key role, referring to him as the 'godfather' in Borg-Warner locating in Hancock County.

Kowal, in receiving the award for his company, said, 'An awful lot of people in this county are deserving of this award. We are indeed proud of being in this community and very much appreciatred the cooperation of everyone."

Bay St. Louis Mayor Vic
Franckiewicz stated, "Hancock County in recent years has been the fastest growing county in the state and this will continue for the next three to five years."

The mayor talked about how just a few years ago the products of the county were mostly timber, agriculture and seafood and how now we have those in addition to so many other things we manufacture.

'We have new high-tech businesses here and more coming in addition to the basics," Franckiewicz added.

Mayor Franckiewicz also presented a Certificate of Appreciation to Charles Ramsey, general manager of Bay Technical Associates, an electronic manufacturing industry in Bay St. Louis.

Bay Tech was a 5th Congressional district nominee for the Governor's Economic Excellence Award by Bay St. Louis in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and Port and Bob Hubbard, Waveland alderman, talked about how the city is celebrating its centennial this year and is having monthly celebrations.

The Waveland representative also talked about the city's new recreation pier under construction and business growth in recent years and the opening of Walmart in the future.

Buz Olsen, Port and Harbor executive director expressed his appreciation to everyone in attendance and how important business and industry is to our economic development.

Volunteers are needed to lend services during local disasters

According to local director Jeanne Garcia, the Red Cross especially needs retired doctors and nurses.

Since active medical workers are usually busy at hospitals during disasters the Red Cross has to enlist people retired from those professions to provide aid at their shelters.

The Red Cross in conjunction with Hancock County Civil Defense provides shelter for those forced to evacuate their homes during disasters.

In addition to the numerous natural disasters, hurricanes, tornadoes and floods which afflict this area, Garcia pointed out, the Red Cross and Civil Defense have to be prepared for man-made disasters."

You never know when an accident involving hazardous materials might occur. Like the one on I-10 last week in Harrison County," Garcia said.

The Red Cross also needs ham radio operators, people interested in serving as shelter managers and in providing food and child care services.

Volunteers will be required to go through brief training session acquainting them in Red Cross and Civil Defense policies, and in dealing with people in crisis situations.

Volunteer's names will be kept on file so they may be called upon when needed.

Boudin commented that shelters served over 1000 people during Hurricane Elena, which was a moderate storm, and if another Camille hit today there wouldn't be enough volunteers to man the shelters.

"In the past," Garcia said, "we have had to wait for people from other areas to come in and provide these services, but if we have trained volunteers locally we can get aid to people more quickly." Shelters are located at Bay Junior High, St. Rose, Waveland Elementary, Annuncia-

County agrees to seek old post office donation

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has approved a letter requesting that the old Bay St. Louis post office building on Main Street be donated to the Michael Haas Sr., attorney for Gulf Regional Planning Commission, and Jim Head executive director of the commission, presented the request for board approval on Friday.

The request is being made in the form of a letter to Anthony M. Frank, postmaster general of the United States. According to the letter, the U.S. Postal Service's decision not to keep the building "presents a unique opportunity for the Post Office to preserve the historical significance of this building and at the same time fill a great need in Hancock County for office, court and other space for county agencies."

'As representative of the people of Hancock County, Mississippi, we do not feel that this historic public building should pass to private ownership, especially in view of the fact that it is so greatly needed for continued public purposes.

In addition, the letter states that current local economic conditions would probably result in the postal service obtaining less than the building is actually worth.

In addition, a Depression-era mural in the building would be preserved, A committee of local residents headed by Nancy Gex of Waveland has been trying to get permission from the postal service to have the mural restored and moved to the new Bay St. Louis Post Office on

Head stated that he would be interested in working with the mural committee if the building is donated to the county, and that perhaps the painting might be more accessible for restoration and viewing if it were in a county-owned building.

He added that it is a good time to seek a donation such as the building because the postal service has recently been told by Congress that no more money will be appropriated to that agency this year and may soon be seeking to sell its unused buildings as a revenue

Congratulations are in order for Borg-Warner Chemical Company's Bay Mar Plant located at Port Bienville Industrial Park upon receiving Hancock County's first Award of Excellence.

Borg-Wraner has made a tremendous impact on Hancock County's economic growth, and Leo Kowal, Bay Mar's manager is also helping to lure other industries to locate in our county.

Economic growth for Hancock County is the concern of our officials and this is important for the development of jobs for our future.

The positive up-beat of everyone in attendance including the Chamber of Commerce, Hancock County Board of Supervisors. Port & Harbor officials and business and industrial leaders, shows the importance of everyone working together towards one goal.

On Tuesday evening at 7 p.m., the Hancock County Extension Service will sponsor a tree grafting seminar. The seminar will be at the Fairgrounds building on Longfellow Road.

County Agent Lee Taylor is hoping there will be a big attendance for this seminar, as several people in the area are interested in tree grafting.

There will be several types of grafting techniques demonstrated.

Warmer weather means there are many residents as well as visitors using our beaches for activities.

It is hoped everyone enjoying our beaches will take the time to police the area before returning home. The cooperation of everyone will be greatly appreciated, as our sand beaches can be free of litter. Efforts are underway for having our beaches replenished in the near future, of course this will take time, and is something to look forward to.

It is good to see the pilings going down for the Garfield Ladner Memorial Pier extension on Waveland's beach.

The new pier should be a great one for fishing, as it is near one of the oldest good fishing spots in the area.

I hope to be out fishing soon myself, as I really enjoy the getting away from everything else.

Homemakers Week

May 1-7 is National Extension Homemaker Week. To mark the event, the Hancock County Extension Homemaker Council will host a celebration at the Bay St. Louis Library Wednesday from 10

"We are so excited to have the health screening van from Slidell Memorial courtesy of Waveland Medical Clinic. The van has equipment and technicians to do checks for cholesterol, glaucoma, and blood pressure," said Margie Welsh, health, food and nutrition

In addition to health screenings the education committees have planned a cultural arts fair in the Crawford Room of the library, weight screening and counseling, a serger demonstration, and several displays of projects homemakers have learned through involvement with club work.

The programs are free and open to any interested individuals. For scheduling of school groups or for more information contact Darlene Underwood at 467-5456.

Law Day USA, May 1

Law Day USA is set aside each year on May 1 by a joint resolution of Congress and Presidential proclamation as an occasion for honoring the place of law in our lives. Law Day is an occasion for all American's to learn more about our law our legal system and our rights. The week following, May 1-7, 1988, has been designated

Community Law Week

The purpose of Law Day is to American citizen to both the principles and the practice of American law and justice. It is a day to reflect on our legal heritage, the role of law in our society and the rights we enjoy under our Constitution.

The theme for Law Day USA is "Legal Literacy: The ABC's of American Law & Justice." This theme is most appropriate because this year Americans will have the opportunity to participate in the most fundamental exercise of our legal system—the electoral process.

Governor's Weekly Column

Gov. Ray Mabus

There is very good news to report this week: Mississippi has taken another major step toward excellence in education.

From the time I announced my candidacy for governor in February 1987, I made education the top priority on my list of goals. And, I said the first important action to improve education should be to raise teacher salaries to the southeastern average.

Now, it is official: Beginning in December, Mississippi teachers will be paid at a rate equal to the southeastern average. I support this increase that as a part of the teacher pay bill just passed by the Legislature.

The current southeastern average is $24,462.

Keeping our teacher salaries competitive is essential if we are to attract and retain the best teachers. It also is a matter of paying teachers a salary in proportion to the enormous responsibilities we give themeducating our children, who are our future.

This is a dramatic, positive step. It is a strong signal to this country that Mississippi is very serious about public education and economic development.

And. I think it's a great Christmas present for our teachers

Other legislation would boost funding for universities and junior colleges by an estimated $65 million, and provide a $40 million to $50 million bond issue for capital improvements at state universities.

These programs would put an estimated $130 million or more into education at all levels during the fiscal year beginning July 1, not including the bond package.

Other improvements contained in the teacher pay measure will make kindergartens a part of the state's Minimum Program appropriation; increase the number and pay of reading aides; authorize a study of a teacher insurance program; and increase pay for teachers with the greatest experience.

Approval of these bills will make this the best year for education in Mississippi since adoption of the Education Reform Act of 1982.

The teacher pay increase also sets the stage for development of a second, landmark education reform act for considera-tion by the Legislature next

This is a very good start, but there remains much we must do to ensure excellence in education in Mississippi. As I have said many times, we must do no less than reinvent education.

I do not want to limit the scope of the education study. Some issues likely to be considered are how to ensure funding adequate for a quality education in rural and urban school districts; lengthening the school day and the school year; and using more paraprofessionals so that teachers can concentrate on teaching.

The push for educational excellence has become not only a quality of life issue, but also an economic development issue.

Nobody has to tell Mississippi that study after study shows that investment in public education is the single most important thing we can do for economic development. We know that and we are acting on it.

This is the message the Mississippi Economic Council has sent state governmental leaders.

Council directors also acknowledged that the Legislature is considering bills providing for tort reforms and mandatory unit management systems in every county. The Council urged immediate, favorable action on these bills.

"Mississippi has a unique opportunity to demonstrate its renewed commitment to the economic advancement of the state and its citizens, and to demonstrate a new commitment to modern and more efficient government," MEC said.

Housekeeping

A weekly summary from the House of Representatives

JACKSON-Money bills took priority in the Mississippi Legislature during the past week as House members, heading into the final stages of the 1988 session, approved increased funding for higher education, junior colleges and mental health facilities.

Several general bills won final passage and were released to the Governor's desk. Many others were sent to House-Senate conference committees to try to resolve differences before the 125-day session ends. Adjournment is scheduled-for Sunday, May 8.

Highlights of the past week in the House included:

-Passage of nearly 100 appropriation bills to fund state agencies and institutions in the coming fiscal year; most of the bills were sent to Conference Committees to resolve House-Senate differences and bring total general fund spending in line with available revenue. —Approval of a hotly debated bill to authorize almost $45.3 million in bonds for repair and renovation projects, including $32 million at the institutions of higher learning, $10 million at community and junior colleges, and almost $3.3 million for educational television. An earlier Senate bill authorized $50 million in bonds for work at the universities.

There was general agreement the repair work and renovations are badly needed, but several lawmakers objected to issuing bonds to finance the projects. Legislators also were divided on whether to include community and junior colleges. An effort to add the community and junior colleges failed at first, but the bill was called up again the next day and the House adopted a revised version of the amendment.

-Final action on a bill to authorize redrawing of school board district lines in county school systems at the request of school boards. The bill was prompted by federal lawsuits involving several counties.

Also receiving final approval was a proposal to transfer $25 million to highway money, derived from restructuring a highway bond sinking account, to help finance teacher pay raises and other general fund programs. The bill was part of the education funding package recommended by the Governor, As passed by the House, another $2 million would go into a special Economic Development Highway Fund to help build access roads for major industrial projects. The Senate agreed to concur in House changes.

Other measures sent to the Governor would encourage the growth of the state's aquaculture industry; permit savings and loan firms to qualify as a depository for public funds if they meet minimum requirements; revise the real estate brokers' licensing law; provide for licensing of occupational therapists; allow cities and counties to adopt comprehensive development plans, including long-range objectives and goals; extend sovereign immunity for another year to protect state and local governments from damage suits; and ensure that dairy farmers can be paid for their milk if the processing plant goes broke. The House passed bills last week to set up a program to CONTINUED TO PAGE 6A

Special week celebrates benefits of owning pets

National Pet Week scheduled may stimulate some people to for May 1 through 7 will focus this year on the psychological and physiological benefits of pet ownership.

The annual series of events is sponsored locally by the Mississippi Veterinary Medical Association. Association president E. Mac Huddleston said the theme in 1988 is "Pets-A Gift of Love."

"Everyone knows that pets provide companionship," Huddleston said. "They also help ease the 'empty nest syndrome for senior citizens and teach youngsters about responsibility.

Recent evidence suggests that pets have a therapeutic effect on the physically and ementally handicapped. Pets makessomeipeoplesseel safe and secure in their homes, and they exercise because pets need exercise, too.' Another thrust of the local campaign is to promote responsible pet ownership. According to Dr. Clyde Taylor, a veterinarian with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, this means providing food, shelter, love and proper health care, as well as making the pet a good citizen.

"Obeying our local leash and licensing laws, vaccinating dogs and cats against rabies, making sure pets don't make excessive noise and cleaning up after our pets are all ways to ensure better pet-community relations." said Dr. Robert McDonald, com-panion animal specialist with the College of Veterinary Medi-cine at Mississippi State University.

The House version included faculty and staff salary increases to take effect in November, and an amendment was inserted to authorize $3.5 million for a new football stadium at Alcorn State University.

Other major funding bills included $79.8 million in general funds for mental health programs, including $2.6 million to reduce the waiting list of patients under court order to be admitted to mental health facil-$62.4 million for the Department of Corrections; $30.7 million for the Public Safety Department; $70.6 million for the University Medical Center; $58.2 million in general support for community and junior colleges; and $72.5 million in special-source funds for the State Aid Road Program,

Most appropriations were likely to be revised this week, depending on whatever compromise is reached between House and Senate versions.

A brisk debate arose in the House last week on a proposed $2 million allocation for the Institute of Technology Development, and the amount was cut back to $1 million as passed earlier by the Senate.

ties, furniture and equipment. A proposed increase in funding for the Governor's office and staff also caused debate. The House approved $1.5 million to cover regular operations of the Governor's office in the coming year, including nine more fulltime employees. This was 12 fewer new employees than the Senate approved and the Governor requested. Supporters said the increase was not out of line with the number of employees allowed other chief executives before former Governor Bill Allain.

In other action, the House voted to reconsider an earlier bill to fund the Fiscal Management Board, and removed $350,000 to finance the Governor's study on government reorganization.

Southern Federal ioins network

Southern Federal Bank for Savings President Ray L. Crowell announced Monday the bank's new membership in the Plus System international Automated Teller Machine (ATM) network.

The Plus System augments the existing Gulfnet regional network, enabling Southern Federal Bank ATM cardholders to obtain cash and conduct other banking transactions at more than 15,000 ATM's throughout the U.S., Canada, Great Britain, Japan, and the Caribbean.

As a member of the Plus network, Southern Federal Bank can offer greater banking convenience to its own customers as well as to PLUS cardholders from around the world who visit the Gulf Coast.

This convenience is just one more means of making the Gulf Coast a more friendly and hospitable environment for our visitors," says Crowell, who anticipates heavy usage of the Plus System at all six of the bank's Gulf Coast locations.

All checking and savings account customers at Southern Federal Bank are eligible to receive a free Gulfnet/Plus System card when their accounts are opened, and those planning

Hancock County Historical Society picnics in Logtown

The Hancock County Historical Society Wednesday hosted its spring picnic at the site of historic Logtown.

A large turnout of members and guests met in downtown Bay St. Louis and formed a carayan of cars decorated with red and white

The procession went first to the Pearlington Cemetery where Mrs. Pat Wilson conducted a brief tour of the grounds.

At Logtown the sites of over sixty homes, churches and businesses had been marked by signs and in many cases, foundations or steps and flowering plants remained.

Each guest was given a small book on the history of Logtown from 1788 which listed the locations of the buildings in order moving eastward from the river. Logtown was a sawmill town located on the Pearl River about ten miles north of the Gulf. In 1848, Henry Weston began an operation that was to become the largest sawmill in the world before it ceased operation in 1930. In 1964 the last remaining homes in Logtown were torn down or moved from the buffer zone when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility was built. Only the cemetery

Under a large tree named the Otis Oak at the Logtown Cemetery a sumptuous picnic was spread and Roy Baxter of Pearlington entertained the party with tales of social customs, parties, the mill and the every-day life that existed in Logtown until 1964,

Under the leadership of Charles Gray, the society's president; the well-organized outing combined an historical review of this area and a party atmosphere prevailed at the picnic luncheon. Several older members of the area who attended added interesting points of information not readily known to the public. Everyone agreed a great time was enjoyed at this historical adventure,

Or consider installing a full-length mirror or mirrored doors in a bedroom, dressing or bathroom area. If a certain nook lacks depth, hang a mirror in its darkest corner, Give the room extra height with a floor-to-ceiling mirrored panel. It will draw the eye upward, making the ceiling seem higher. Mirrors are also helpful in reflecting light. Study a room to decide where a mirror would best be placed for optimum results. The reflection of windows on the opposite wall provides a cheerful outdoor view while facing in.

Mirrors can add drama to any decor. They can be a striking asset and yet require so little care to always look good. For optimum sparkle, clean with an ammonia and warm-water solution, using ½ cup of ammonia to a gallon of water, and apply with a sponge or cloth. The fastest and easiest way to remove the solution from a large expanse of mirror is with a squeegee, wiping the squeegee after each stroke with a dry, lint-free cloth. WATERBEDS

To help define a waterbed and to insure certain features of quality, the Waterbed Manufacturers Association and the California Bureau of Home Furnishings formulated guidelines for manufacturers and consumers.

The California Consumer Protection Law on Waterbeds is the only law of its kind. It has been adopted by the waterbed industry as a standard for product performance. The regulation can serve the retailer as well as the consumer.

To be sold as a waterbed, the product must include:

'A watermattress. A container to hold any liquid substance which can be used for reclining or sleeping.

'A frame. A structure to contain and support the mattress. A heater. A heating device that will raise the temperature of the liquid in the mattress. A liner. A material provided to capture the liquid in case of a leak or rupture.

Additionally, the mattress must carry a label stating the registry and the name of the manufacturer and information on how to properly use the mattress. The regulations also specify standards of materials used such as weight, thickness and volatility of the vinyl, plus the testing procedures the vinyl must pass.

There are also guidelines for the testing and operation of waterbed heaters and required consumer information on algecides and disinfectants that may be used to safely clean the liner and mattress. Complete directions for the safe use of the entire assembly will also be available.

The law establishes the difference in technology between a "flotation sleep system" and a "waterbed." A waterbed must have a heater while other systems do not require a heating

p.m. Vigil Mass, first Saturday. Health Department urges wastewater law compliance

Some owners of new homes in Mississippi are inadvertently breaking state sewage laws the Legislature enacted during the 1987 session, say Mississippi State Department of Health officials.

New regulations regarding wastewater disposal went into effect in November, said Lydia Strayer, director of general sanitation. State lawmakers mandated that, for the first time, all wastewater disposal systems must be approved for installa-ers must be licensed. Some lawmakers mandated that, for the first time, all wastewater disposal systems must be approved for installation and all commercial installers must be licensed.

tion and all commercial install-

Some home builders and buyers of mobile homes are unaware of the new regulations, said Strayer. But others have ignored the laws, probably because approved sewage systems can cost more, she added. Only homes with sewage systems installed since November 1987 are affected.

pians building new homes or purchasing mobile homes should call the sanitarian at their country health department before construction begins. By law, buyers must obtain prior approval of the sewage system. The sanitarian will help arrange a site evaluation.

Then, after the sewage system has been constructed, the sanitarian will inspect and approve it if it meets the new requirements. The owner will be given an approval form. The disposal system should not be used until it is approved, said Straver.

The approval fee, paid by the homeowner, is $35.

Homeowners should hire a licensed installer to construct the disposal system, said Strayer. Contractors in every county have passed competency tests and paid a $50 certification fee. Sanitarians have a list of licensed contractors,

Homeowners can legally install a system themselves without a license, added Stray-
